Excerpt: .on the public exchequer we have seen, but of greater interest to us is the question, What about the children themselves? Whose fault is it that so large a percentage of our school children are physically below the average which should keep them in their proper grades? This line of questioning opens up a field of investigation which properly belongs to the educators who arrange the schedules. There is an honest difference of opinion among thoughtful school men as to what the standard for any given grade shall be. Shall we insist on taking as our standard the bright, healthy child with bodily powers equal to its mental capacity? Or shall we suit the courses to the capabilities of the more backward child, with impaired physical stamina and lessened power of application? In the first instance we are from the outset disqualifying a large...
