Bledsoe, Esq., Of Wake; Delivered in the Senate of North Carolina, on the 12th January, 1859, on the Bill to Alter the Constitution So as to Enable the General Assembly to Equalize Taxation I regard this restriction in the amended constitution, and the inequality and injustice of the revenue laws of North-Carolina which are the result of that restriction, as incompatible with the great principle of democratic republican equality, upon which the constitution was framed and the government established. If that restriction, which was an innovation upon the constitution of our fathers, is incompatible with the principles upon which the government was established, that alone, if there were no other, furnishes a sufficient reason for the passage of this bill. In establishing the position which I have assumed, it is proper that I should advert to the circumstances under which the constitution was framed and the government established, in order to a clear understanding of the objects designed to be accomplished by those who originated and organized it. We are assembled here to day, under the provisions of a constitution professing to have been framed by the representative of the people, by the authority of the people, for the benefit of the people, and adopted by them as the organic law of the State. Then the question arises, did those who framed the constitution under the provisions of which the Senate is now in session, have the right to set up a government for their mutual and equal protection and benefit? Those who arc at all familiar with the history of the government of North-Carolina, will recollect that...
