That evening, while Glory was washing up the tea-things, Aunt Faith put on cloak and hood, and walked over to Cross Corners. No--I won t take off my things, she replied to Mrs. Gartney s advance of assistance. I ve just come over to tell you what I m going to do. I ve made up my mind to take the minister to board. And when the washing and ironing s out of the way, next week, I shall fix up a room for him, and he ll come. That s a capital plan, Aunt Faith! said her nephew, with a tone of pleased animation. Cross Corners will be under obligation to you. Mr. Armstrong is a man whom I greatly respect and admire. So...
